Liya Terms of Service

Effective 4 November 2026.

Using Liya

Liya provides a space to explore emotional content, keep personal thoughts, and participate in a community. Some features may be unavailable while the service develops. Use the app lawfully and respect other people.

Accounts and your content

You can create or access a Liya account using an email address and password or Sign in with Apple. If you register with email, you may need to confirm your address before signing in. Keep your sign-in details secure. Earlier versions supported anonymous accounts; an existing anonymous session may be lost if the session or app is removed or the device is lost. Email and Apple accounts do not automatically combine with an earlier anonymous account. You are responsible for the content you choose to create and for using only material you have the right to use.

Conduct and availability

Do not use the service for harassment, exploitation, unlawful content, impersonation, spam, or attempts to disrupt the service. Community posts and comments are visible to other members; messages are for their participants. You can block members or report content, though report review has not yet been configured. Features may change or become unavailable. Local drafts and device-only actions are not published or delivered to other people.

AI companion

Liya AI is an automated service that can generate conversational responses. Its responses may be inaccurate or unsuitable and do not replace professional advice or emergency services. You decide whether to use it and should avoid sharing information you do not wish to send. Before AI conversations are sent to a third-party provider, the app explains the sharing and asks for your permission; you may withdraw that permission in the AI privacy controls. Our Privacy Policy explains how the feature handles information.

Support

The proposed support address is support@liya.com. It has not yet been confirmed or activated.